Jessica Nicholson, Phoenix Recovery Academy-Director of Academy and Community Relations

Jessica found her passion for helping others through her own personal journey of recovery. After getting sober, she began working in the substance abuse treatment field and volunteering her time to local nonprofits, as well as the Montgomery County State's Attorney's Office. She would speak at area middle and high schools, sharing her personal experience, in hopes of educating others on the topic of substance use disorder. It was through those experiences and her interactions with her students, that she found her love for working with adolescents.
